In October 1975, her profession continued in Camden at Pyne Poynt Middle School as a B.S.I.P. Reading Teacher. From this assignment, she transferred to Camden High School, becoming the SRA Reading Teacher and eventually the Reading Department Chairperson. During her tenure in Camden, she was appointed to the position of Reading Helping Teacher. Later she became an Administrative Assistant to one of the Assistant Superintendents. From this position, she became a Reading Supervisor and retired as the Director of Curriculum & Instruction in 2005. Throughout her time in Camden, she always found time to mentor students.

Upon retiring, after 36 years in education, Delia continued to devote time to mentoring students in the Camden and Pennsauken School Districts. This was a source of enjoyment! Presently, she is a mentor at the Camden High School Campus. She has individual students she supports and is a volunteer at the Creative Arts High School for “Girl Talk”, a group for young ladies who discuss topics of their choosing during lunch.

Chief Jesse Flax

Jesse Flax's journey with the Camden Fire Department began in 1994, a year that marked a significant transition in his family's legacy of public service. His father, a dedicated firefighter, retired after 27 years of service to the Camden community, a tradition of commitment that Jesse proudly continues. His sister, too, has contributed to this tradition, retiring as a state correctional officer. This deep-rooted commitment to public service is a source of inspiration for all who know Jesse.

Jesse's early years in the Camden Fire Department were marked by his exceptional commitment to excellence and a rapid ascent through the ranks. In 2001, he was promoted to Fire Captain, a position that allowed him to significantly impact the department and the firefighters under his command. His dedication to the fire service extended beyond his immediate duties; from 2002 to 2008, Jesse contributed to the department's training division by teaching several academy classes. His passion for mentoring and educating the next generation of firefighters was evident in the success of his trainees, including one of the department's largest recruit classes of 34 firefighters.

In 2023, Mayor Victor Carstarphen recognized his dedication, experience, and leadership by promoting Jesse Flax to the highest level as Fire Chief of the Camden Fire Department. Under his leadership, the department is poised to continue its tradition of excellence in serving the Camden community.
